THE BARRETT-JACKSON CHARITY CARS BRING MORE THAN $5M

by Tony Piff

Barrett-Jackson's 42-year commitment to philanthropy has raised more than $50m for charity to date. This year in Scottsdale, the auction house waived its fees on 21 important vehicles to the jingle of over $5m.

Ele Chesney, one of the world's foremost female car collectors, has been donating cars for more than a decade. She donated two cars at this sale: a 1951 Chevrolet Suburban carryall and a 2008 Shelby GT Barrett-Jackson Edition convertible. The Suburban sold for $70,000 and the Shelby sold for $100,000.

"I bought the Suburban at Palm Beach last year from Joe Riley for Johns Hopkins," Chesney said. She donated the car right back to Johns Hopkins. "When I bought the Mustang, I pointed at Craig Jackson and said, 'This one's for you.'" In support of the Barrett-Jackson Cancer Research Fund, she immediately donated the Shelby to the TGen Foundation, and both cars were trucked directly to Scottsdale. "I never even brought them home," Chesney said. In Scottsdale, the Shelby was purchased by Chevrolet dealer Rick Hendrick. "Rick looked at me and said, 'This one's for you.' Now he has a Ford in the family."

Craig Jackson, chairman and CEO of Barrett-Jackson, said, "It was an honor to help raise more than $5 million for some of the nation's most active and worthy causes at Barrett-Jackson's Scottsdale auction this year. We have the most generous fans, bidders and consignors, and to give back to communities all across the nation is an incredible feeling. There's no telling what 2014 will bring."

Said Chesney, a longtime philanthropist, "Wherever you're needed, you try and help."
